

From: R9Communications [R9Communications@epa.gov]
Sent: 7/5/2022 7:37:40 PM
To: R9Clips [R9Clips@epa.gov]
Subject: News Clips for July 5, 2022

News Clips from Region 9 Media Outlets
July 5, 2022

Note for readers: Due to limited access for certain news outlets, you may experience a paywall for some titles. If you want an article, please contact R9's Library at library-reg9@epa.gov with the specific outlet, date, and article title.

SCOTUS Ruling on EPA Emissions Puts State Climate Goals at Risk

Source: Public News Radio - July 5

Drought and shipping woes put squeeze on California almond growers

Source: LA Times – July 5

New study finds condors remain at risk of DDT, other chemicals

Source: San Diego Union Tribune – July 5

Rampant wildfires once led to global mass extinction, scientists say. Can it happen again?

Source: LA Times – July 5

Toxic algae prompts danger warning at Indian Creek Reservoir

Source: Record Courier – July 4

How wildfires are changing the Santa Catalina Mountains

Source: AZ Central – July 4

What to Know About California's Landmark Plastics Law

Source: NYT – July 3

Unable to fund Exide cleanup, state wants contaminated Vernon site added to federal Superfund list

Source: Press Telegram – July 3

Also of Note:

In light of EPA court ruling, new focus on states' power (WENY News Sacramento, 07/05)

SCOTUS ruling on EPA puts new focus on states' power (CBS San Francisco, 07/04)

California climate rules won't be undercut by Supreme Court's ruling, experts say (Palo Alto Online, 07/04)

State pushes forward with California car emissions rule, but that won't close the 2030 emissions gap (Vermont Digger, 07/04)

California's drought is dire. But there's a surprising bright spot that may make this year better than last (San Francisco Chronicle, 07/02)

Can Phoenix, the hottest city in America, survive climate change? (Yahoo News, 07/02)

State calls for shuttered Exide plant in Vernon to be declared superfund site (Fox 11, 07/01)